Brown and Vida Hit, At Pauoa Meeting

Thurston and Tiser

CIVIC FEDERATION BACKS IAUKEA

The Republican meeting at Pauoa last night was a good one in every respect, with the possible exception of the fact that a couple of the speakers, and not the best either, because so many of their own talk, that they kept the meeting very late, but unduly long and tiring speeches. Castro and Kaleo were the chief offenders.

A good crowd attended the meeting and although heavy showers drove many of the audience away, there was still a very fair number of voters who stayed with the game listening to the speakers with apparent interest. Chas. Booth presided.

W. O. Smith, the first speaker, exhorted his hearers to vote the straight ticket, and spoke earnestly in favor of Kaho.

Chillingworth Applauded

He was followed by Chas. Chillingworth, who was received with great applause, he devoted most of his speech to showing the poor result which Hawaii would obtain by sending McClanahan to Congress.

Link McCandless spoke in Hawaiian, like the two preceding speakers, on political favors given him in former years, he reminded the voters of the good work the Republican Legislature had done in passing the County Act, thereby fulfilling its election promises.

Link waxed enthusiastic, describing the hard work he had done in the Senate to pass the bill to pay laborers $1.50, and hinted at future legislation in that direction. The crowd received it with a fat smile. That kind of talk was evidently welcome. McCandless also reminded his hearers that he had secured $20,000 for the Pauoa road. The powers that be had held up that work, but that was not his fault.

Advertiser Roasted

A. M. Brown said that he appealed for the support of the voters. He had had a hard fight eighteen months ago against Peopos and Henry. He had a hard fight this time, when the Democrats ran Iaukea with the backing of the Civic Federation, which last time backed Henry. The Civic Feds were backing Iaukea as strongly as it backed Henry. "If you doubt my word you read the Advertiser, which is now backing Iaukea as strongly as it backed Henry," he said.

Iaukea had deserted the Republican for the Home Rulers, and had left them for the Democrats. "God knows how long he will stay with them. Only as long as things go his way, and then he will quit," he said fervently. Iaukea had broken his pledges to the Republicans and the Home Rulers. He would also break his pledge to the Democrats. "You lie," shouted a gin-sodden voice from the crowd, but silence received it. Has Hard Fight

Brown went on to say that Iaukea made promises which he would break. Brown made no promises. He appealed to the voters on his record. If he were elected his administration of police affairs would be good as it had been heretofore, nothing more and nothing less. In one case the voters had a man they knew. In the other they had an unknown quantity. "I am making a hard fight, because I have a hard fight before me. But if I am fighting hard for myself I am fighting hard for every man on the ticket," he continued. He then went on to speak for Kaho, a son of the soil, against McClanahan, a practical stranger, and exhorted his hearers to vote the straight Republican ticket.

Harris on Tariff

W. W. Harris said everything was fair in love and politics. At least that was what the Democrats said. They had shown that by bringing up the Cuban annexation question as an issue. They had argued that a Republican candidate would be bound to support annexation, while a Democrat would not. It would be better to send Kaho, a Republican, who would support the protective tariff. Instead of a Democrat, who would try to repeal the duty on sugar. As long as the tariff remained, Hawaii would be protected, whether Cuba was annexed or not. All the rest of the Democratic planks were stolen from the Republicans. They said they would pass a $1.50 minimum wage law. The power did not lie with the Legislature; it lay with the Super-visors, and if a Republican Board were elected, Harris believed, they would make it $1.50 or more. Such a Board would also build the Pauoa road. He asked them if they would vote for the party which did things or that which only made promises.

"Vote for anybody," muttered the befuddled gentleman, but he raised no answering murmur.

Harris concluded with an appeal for the straight ticket.

Sam Dwight spoke about the bad weather and the straight ticket.

Machine Talk Foolish

John W. Cathcart said the Hawaiian and Portuguese vote had always carried the Republican ticket. They were voted for Kaho should vote the whole ticket to enable him to tell of the success of his party. He exhorted the young men to fling their fortunes to the successful party. The Democrats based their hopes on a few disappointed Republicans. McClanahan had raised the bugle of Cuban annexation and the cry of "machine" had also been raised. "It is all foolish talk, and would not frighten a little child in the dark." The secret ballot at the convention showed that there was no machine.

Hustace in Humorous

Charles Hustace made one of his characteristic humorous speeches in Hawaiian in a Jack Lucas. He had a big stomach. That was because he was a Republican. He promised one thing, and that was to fight for the Pauoa road.

A. D. Castro greeted the "ladies" whose smiles were the light of the evening and the men whose duty it was to vote.

He spoke of the platform in general, making an exceedingly long speech, which he ended with a few remarks in Portuguese.

E. A. C. Long said he would speak to his former classmates. The convention had seen fit to elect Castro, who the Portuguese could feel proud of. Correa had unfortunately not been chosen, lacking two votes. This, however, should not prevent the Portuguese from supporting the man who had been chosen.

Vote Straight Ticket

E. W. Quinn said he was a Republican because he believed the Republican form of government was the best. It was the people's party. He preached the gospel of the straight ticket, and promised, if elected, to work for the best interests of the people of the Territory. He referred to the passage of the County Act, which he said, needed remedying, which the Republican candidates would supply. Quinn said he had worked hard for the Pauoa road. He would work again for improvement in that district.

W. T. Rawlins said that he did not think he needed an introduction. He asked for support for the entire Republican legislative ticket. This would insure good legislation. He had heard that Kalea was going to suffer from the scratching of the tickets. Rawlins predicted that he would go in on the bandwagon. The ticket scratchers were party jumpers. Kalea was a good man. He had shown that by his six months' service as a judge on Maui. He had always stood by the party.

Kaleo spoke at exceedingly great length in Hawaiian, saying that he would work alike for the rich and the poor, as all were alike in the eyes of the law.

Vida After Thurston

Henry Vida said that attacks had been made on him. He wanted to remind his hearers that in November, 1904, he was appointed Deputy High Sheriff to High Sheriff Henry. His commission was approved by Governor Carter. He had been selected by Attorney General Lorrain Andrews to fetch Kapaa from London. Again Carter approved his commission. After that members of the Civic Feds approached him to run for Deputy Sheriff with Rawlins as High Sheriff, but both he and Rawlins were too loyal to the Republican party to accept. Since then, because he would not become a party to disrupt, "because of that they had no use for me," he said. "They wrote me up in the papers, saying that I was dishonest. I must have been deemed trustworthy, capable and honest when Henry appointed me and Carter approved of it, and the Civic Federation wanted me to run as its candidate. The reason is this, there is a clique, whose mouthpiece is the Advertiser, which has no use for me and Brown. Their policy, and that of Thurston, is rule or ruin, and when he can't rule he will ruin. He stands ready to disfranchise the Hawaiian people today. At one time he was a big power here, but he lost his control with County Government and that is why they are so. In the Advertiser this morning they printed the names of seventeen or eighteen unfortunate people who had been brought to the station and charged with being drunk. They did not like the idea of their being kept confined all night and released in the morning. They claim this was only done recently, for votes, but it has been done for one and a half years, since Brown and I have been in office. Because a poor unfortunate falls by the wayside after he has taken a little too much, should we have him fined $5 or $6? Sometimes they can't pay their fine and go to jail. What about their wives and children, who have nothing to eat. I leave it to you, if you think the Sheriff and I have acted right I ask you to vote for us, if we have acted wrong, don't."

He then asked the voters to vote for the whole ticket.

"Machine" Is Roasted

By Democrats

At Puunui Meeting

SPEAKERS USE HIGH PAY BAIT

The Democratic meeting held at 8 o'clock last night at the corner of Wyllie and Liliha streets was well attended by the residents of that district and had it not been for the rain the meeting would probably have been more enthusiastic. David Kanahu, one of the candidates for the House, nominated as chairman and also acted as interpreter for his haole friends. He was the first speaker on the program and took occasion to say that if elected he would work for an appropriation of a suitable amount for the maintenance of lepers and if necessary provide a law so that any person can treat lepers. He urged the Hawaiians present to join the Democratic party, as it represented the poor people, while the Republican represented the rich. He said the Republican party had always broken its promises, and could not be trusted again. The Democrats, if elected, would change the present peculiarities that are existing in the Government affairs under the Republican administration.

Poor People's Party

Edward Loke, editor "Ke Aloha Aha" and a candidate for the House, was next introduced. He said that he was in favor of appropriation for the maintenance of the leper settlement; also that the Democratic party represented poor people, as some of its candidates are workmen. He said that poor people could expect more good from the Democratic party than they could from the Republicans. His conclusion he asked for the support of the Democratic ticket.

David Kanahu, the chairman, said that it was a good thing to go around from house to house canvassing, as it would get the people acquainted with the candidates.

Rose Is Popular

Chas. Rose, the candidate for County Auditor, received a great ovation as he approached the stand to speak. He was introduced by the chairman as a graduate of the St. Louis College and a Hawaiian. Rose advised the people to be very careful in voting, else there would be many votes thrown out. He asked for the support of the whole ticket, as every candidate was qualified and competent to perform his duties.

Thomas Gandall, Representative from the Fourth District, urged for the support of the whole ticket. He said that, if elected, he would try to raise the pay of the Government laborers from $1.25 a day. He said he was sorry to see his fellow-workmen getting that small pay for the amount of work the Government was getting under the Republican administration. At this point David Kanahu, before introducing another speaker, said that he was opposed to the immigration of Orientals, as all the private work was given them on account of their cheap charges. The Hawaiians could not get along with small pay. He said the Republicans claimed they loved him, but the trouble was that they gave work to the outsiders, and paid no attention whatever to the Hawaiians. Democrats would first look after the kamaainas and the malihinis mahope.

Wanted New Sheriff

Joseph Fern, candidate for Superior Fifth District, was next introduced and said if elected it was due to the votes received from all political parties—the Home Rule, Republican and the Democratic. He asked the people to change the Sheriff and vote for Iaukea. Frank Harvey, Thomas Gandall, in fact, all the Democratic ticket. He had wanted to talk longer, but was interrupted by rain.

Col. C. J. McCarthy, candidate for the Senate, said that if elected, he would work for and in the interest of the Democratic party. He said that the present election law should be changed to agree with the United States Government election law. The Democratic party had a very simple law. He said that the Territory here should be re-districted, as the Organic Act specifically provided that the Territory of Hawaii could re-district itself. He said there would be good voters in Oahu and it would be difficult for the members of the edit for the members of the House from say, Waikiki, Nuuanu, Honolulu proper, Kilihae, Waimane, Koolaula, etc., to know what the people of the other districts wanted. The Home Rule party in the Republican Legislature was blocked by the Republican party in nearly every measure introduced. He asked for the support for the Democratic party, as it would do as it promised the people. (Applause.)

Konaka Machine

H. J. Moosman said that if the Republican and the Democratic platform were sent out to the Hawaiians for comparison no Hawaiian would know and comprehend the Republican platform. He said, according to the Evening Bulletin, W. W. Harris, W. O. Smith and the Kakaia meeting were loudly cheered by the crowd. They were cheered to get campaign funds as the majority of the crowd was read men working under 200c Johnson. The Democratic party was for the people and expected them to give it their support. What had been done in the past by the Republican party would be repeated if the Democratic party did not get in. It failed it would be the last time. "The Republican party would spend more money if necessary to beat them, but the speaker was afraid they did not have enough money to carry them through this time."

David L. Kahalemanu, candidate for Representative from the Fifth District, was next called and said he was tired of seeing the Republican party in power, as it always broke its promises. He asked the crowd to try the Democrats this time, as a good many of them were poor and will naturally look more carefully into the interests of the poor.

Thayer on the Stump

W. W. Thayer, candidate for County Attorney, said: Ladies and gentlemen: I've just come from a very enthusiastic meeting at Kakaia. Every body there is supporting the Democrats, and I hope you have just as much enthusiasm for the Democrats. One issue in this campaign is: "Shall we want a few men to run the County government or the people to run the government?" Look at the last Republican convention; the action taken there was all done by a few men and the voice of the people was not heard. The people had no chance in the Republican convention. In the Democratic convention everybody had a chance to say what he wanted and the voice of the people was finally adopted. He said it was a good time to smash the machine. If his hearers would elect men on the Republican ticket they were not responsible for them; but the Democrats were. The Republican candidates are not first worthy, but the candidates on the Democratic ticket could be trusted. He asked therefore for support for the straight Democratic ticket to smash the Republican machine. Jack Is a Democrat

Jack Kahalela said: Fellow citizens, a few days ago you nominated me on the Republican ticket a candidate for Deputy Sheriff of Honolulu, but I was defeated on account of the same Republican machine. I am now a Democrat. Since they turned me down they also have turned you down. Ships change their course, and I have changed mine and hope you will follow me. The Republican party will not do it, either as the police station is a public building, a Democratic member of the Board of Supervisors has some more good, comparatively speaking, than any other one man, and it is a credit to the Democratic party. I hope you will give your votes for Iaukea. Brown's friends are still asking me to join the Republican party but I have absolutely withdrawn my nomination. I now, in closing, ask you to practice to vote and avoid splits. Aloha Democrats. Aloha, (Applause.)

Will Raise Pay

Frank H. Harvey, candidate for Supervisor at Large, after the introduction, said that he was the same Harvey since his birth and will so remain till his end. He said he was seeking votes and hopes to find a good many, as the Bible says: "The sheep, the goats, etc." He was speaking of $1.25 a day for Government council laborers pay, as it was insufficient. It should be raised. As long as the Republican party was in power, it would never stop its misrepresentations. All the Republican candidates were practically machine men, and the voters must therefore work together to accomplish something. He said he was badly mistaken if he thought Harvey would fail in the election. It was through the action of the majority of the Democratic Territorial and County Convention that he had gotten most votes, and he was defeated. The votes should therefore pull together and win the battle.
